

Two of Ms. Bishop's third graders come from families who have trouble paying their winter heating bills.

But EnergyShare helps them stay just as warm at night as their classmates.

You can't always tell at a glance which Virginians need a little extra help. Circumstances change, often without warning, and just as often through no fault of the people affected. It's not the challenges they can see coming that cause some to have trouble paying their bills. It's the things they can't predict.

That's why Dominion created EnergyShare. It's a fuel assistance program that helps pay home heating bills for those in need living within the company's service area. The heating source doesn't matter—oil, gas, kerosene, wood and electricity are all covered. What does matter is that EnergyShare has donated more than $22 million to families in need during its 24-year history. Last winter, EnergyShare provided more than $1 million to help others bear the cold.

Because at Dominion, the power that matters most is the power to make a difference.
