

Sometimes Henry refers to his “fixed income” as his “broken income,” but it’s no joke when he can’t pay his heating bill.

Fortunately, EnergyShare can help.

Choosing between food, medicine and heat isn’t a choice, it’s a trap many Virginians fall into. It’s hard to think about these types of choices or the people who have to make them. But at Dominion, we believe it’s our responsibility to do everything we can to provide heat to those who have nowhere else to turn.

That’s why Dominion created EnergyShare. It’s a fuel assistance program that helps pay home heating bills for those in need living within the company’s service area.

The heating source doesn’t matter—oil, gas, kerosene, wood and electricity are all covered. What does matter is that EnergyShare has donated more than $22 million to families in need during its 24-year history. Last year, Dominion, along with its customers, provided more than $1 million to help others bear the cold.

Because at Dominion, the power that matters most is the power to make a difference.
